

Systems council is working with AESS to conduct a systems engineering survey. Specifically, Systems Council and AESS are working with National Defense Industrial Association to broaden the reach of the survey by inviting IEEE member companies to participate. The survey results will be useful to both AESS and Sys Council in their understanding of current systems engineering issues in industry.

Systems Council is working with members of AESS to further the collaboration with Stevens Institute and INCOSE on the BKCASE project, which is focused on developing a curriculum for systems engineering.

Barry Greenburg, an AESS member, is Chair of the IEEE Large Scale Systems Integration Technical Committee, a Systems Council activity.

On a personal note, I have been working to launch a Systems Council Distinguished Lecturer Program. We have established our processes based on AESS's DL Program, and are in the process of identifying speakers.
